Visualizing Trees

- How many nodes?
- How bread is the tree?
- How deep it the tree?
- Is the tree balanced?
- Which branches are largest?
- Which nodes have most children?
- Node/link attributes ...

Implicit
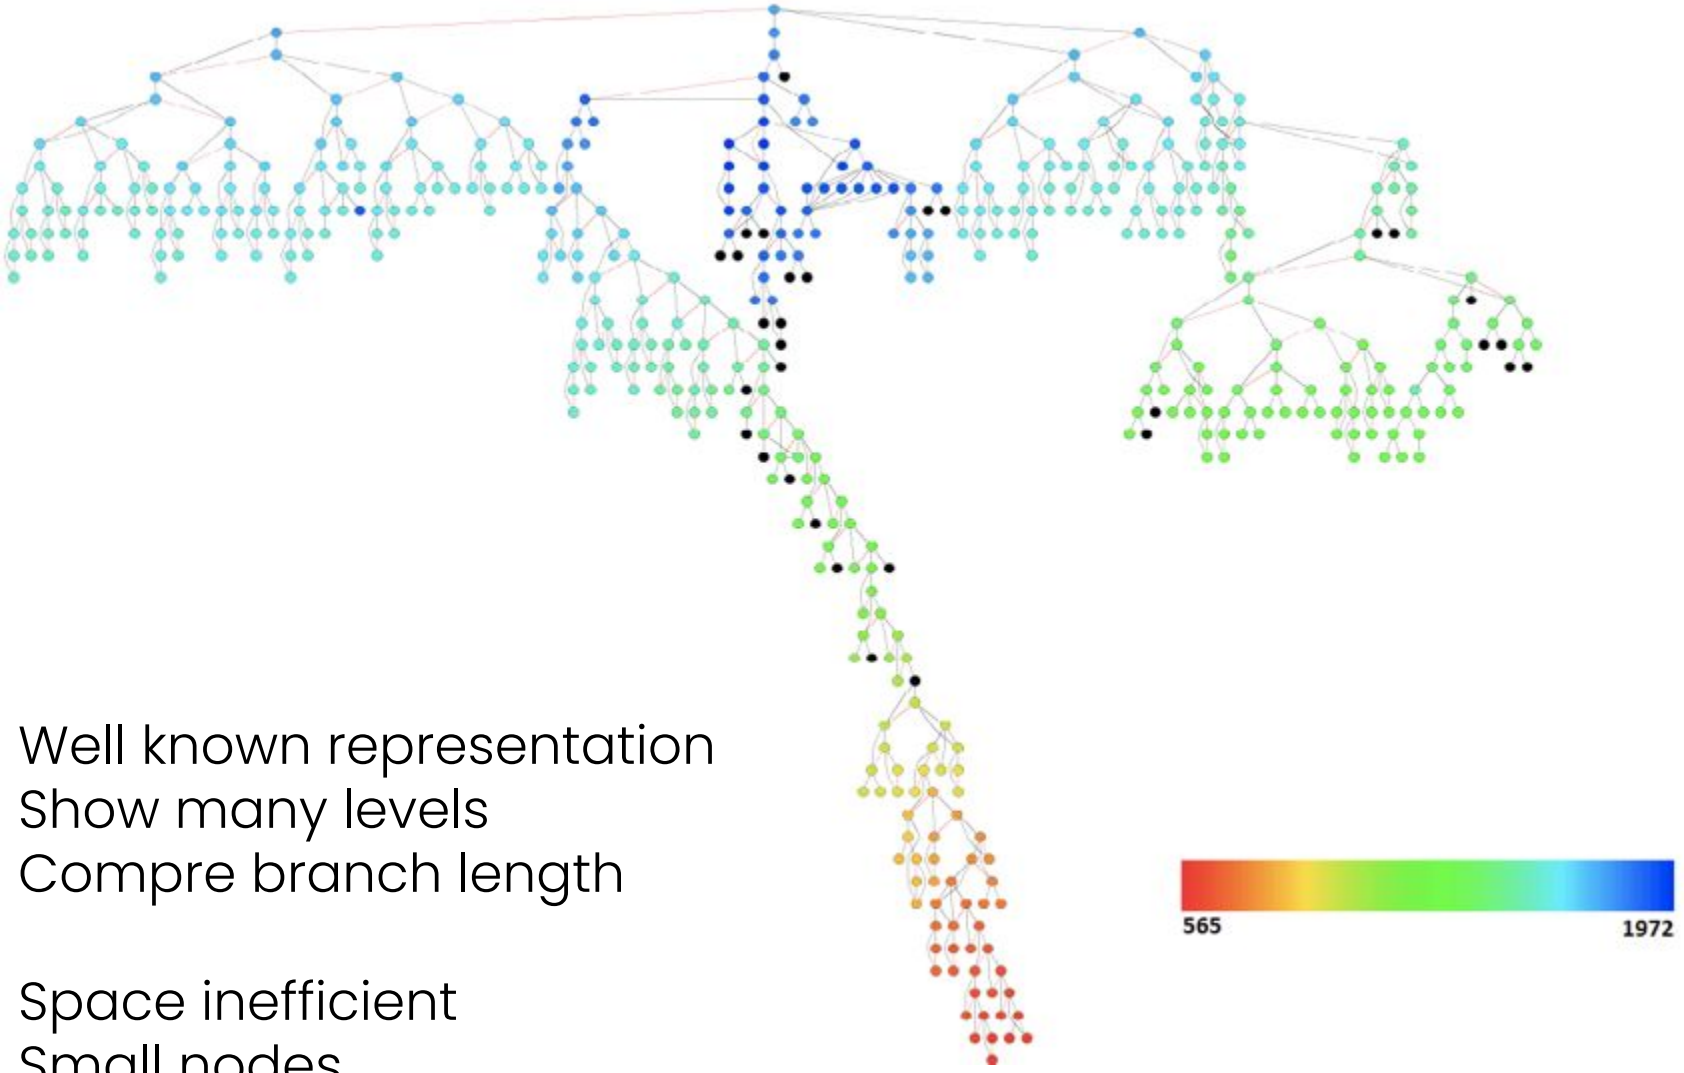
(adjacency)

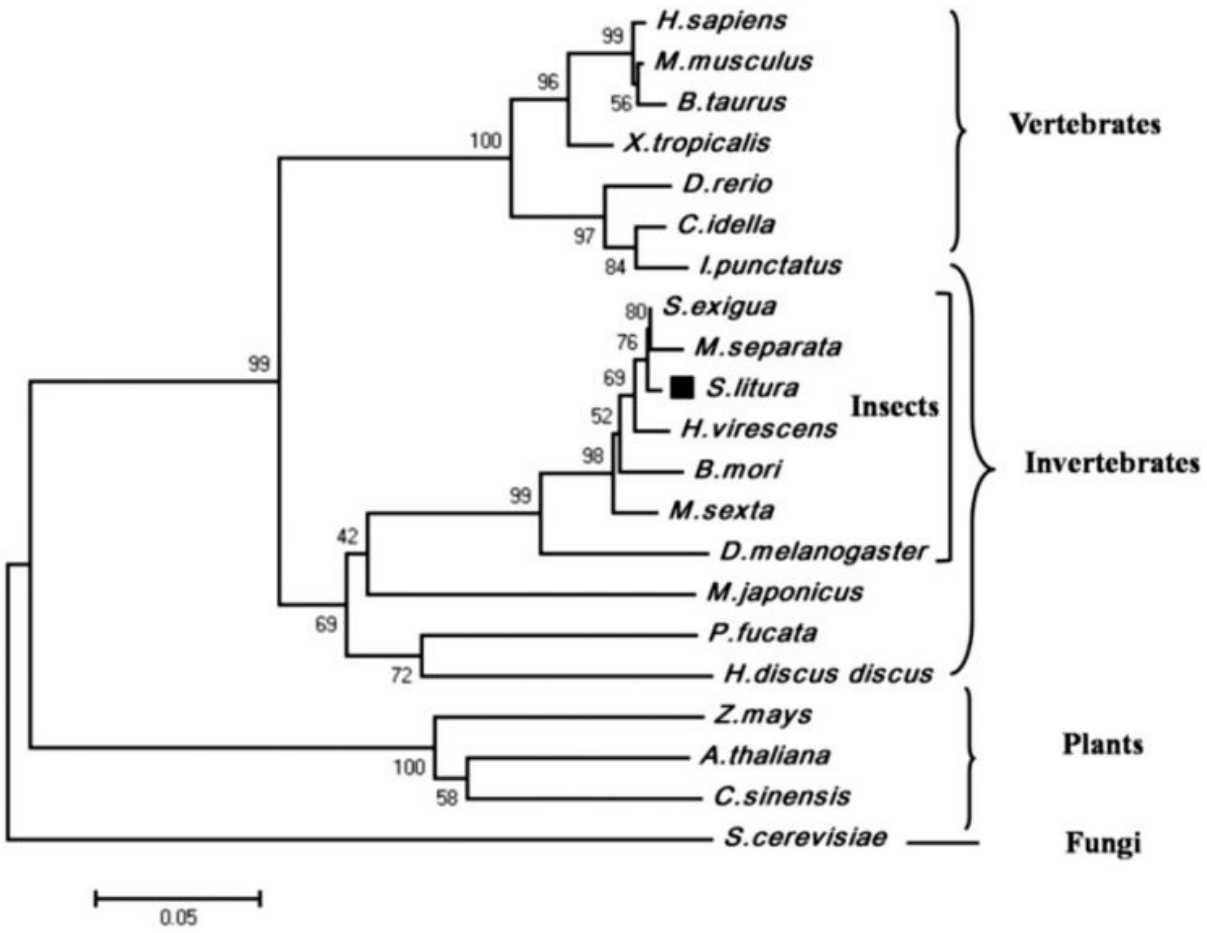
Explicit: Node-link Diagram



+ Well known representation
+ Show many levels
+ Compre branch length

- Space inefficient
- Small nodes

Explicit: Dendogram / Phylogram



\+ Shows similarity

\- Only 2 children
\- Parent nodes not named

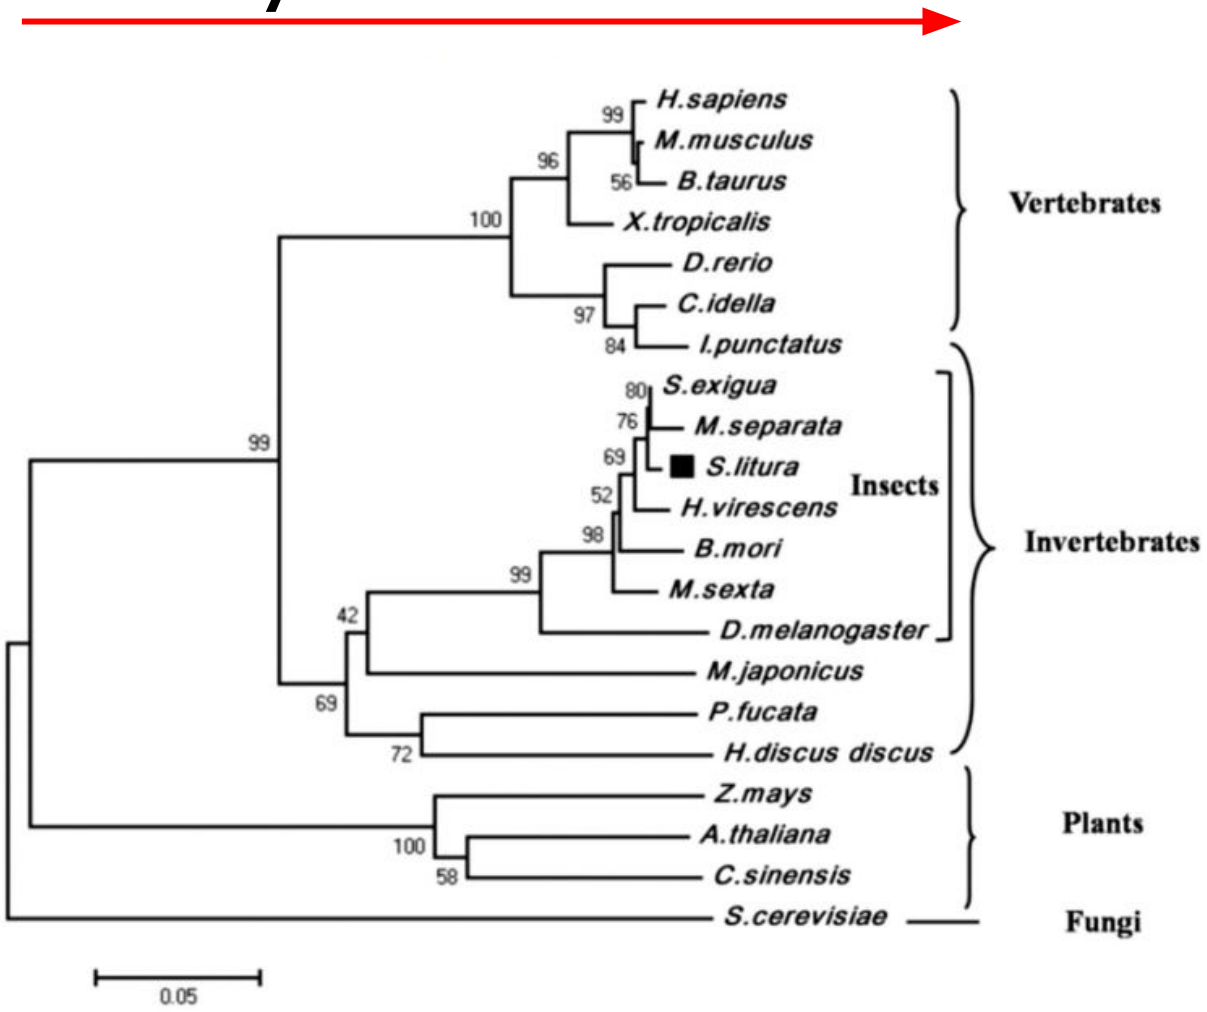
Similarity



\+ Shows similarity

\- Only 2 children
\- Parent nodes not named

Explicit: File-browser

Interactive open and close

Implicit: Icicle plot

Node = squares
Relations = adjacency

+ Can represent time
+ Depth clearly visible
+ Provides space for text
+ Can show time

- Leaves can get very small

Implicit: Treemap

+ Space-filling
+ Size encodes information
+ Space for additional visual encoding (color)

Treemaps size comparison?

Hard due to different aspect ratios of rectangles

Treemap layouts: Slice+Dice

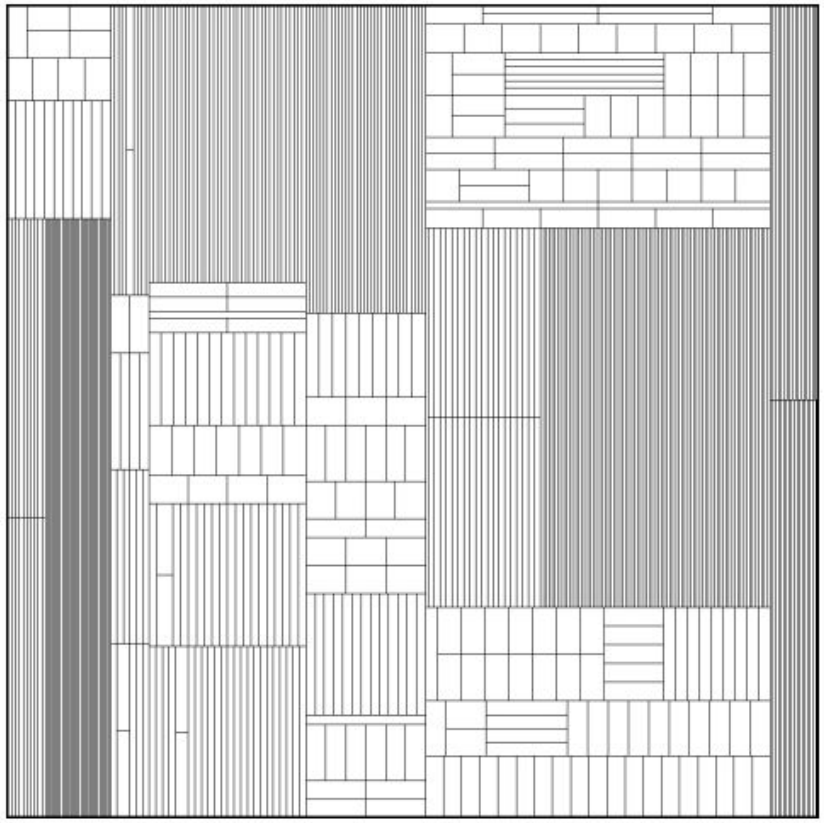
Different node sizes



Same(!) node sizes

Treemap layouts: Squarified

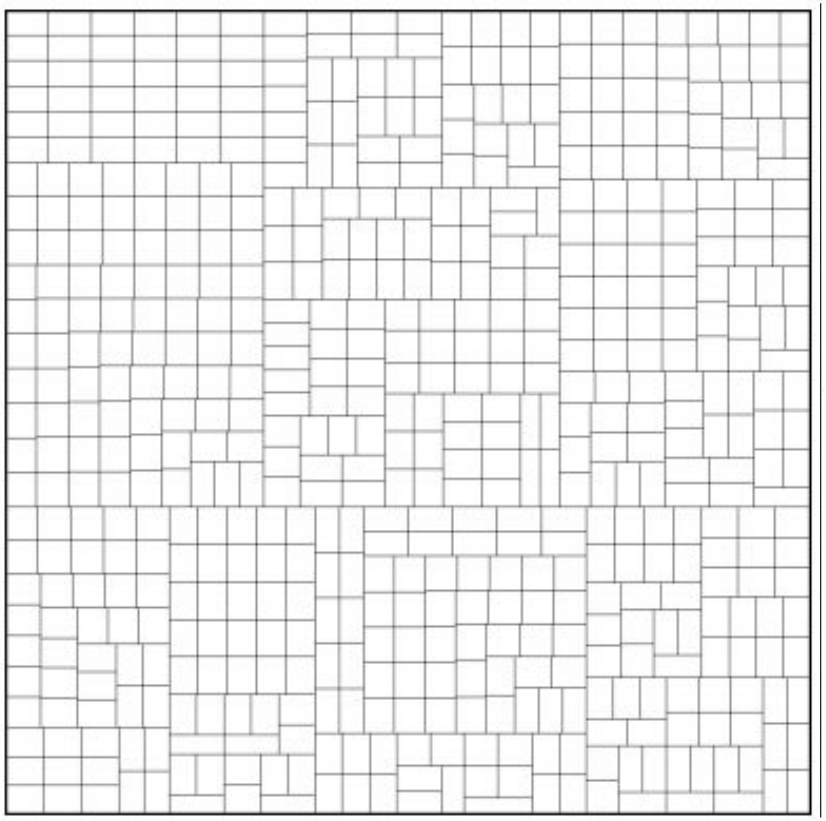
Different node sizes



Same(!) node sizes

Treemap layouts: Voroni

Different node sizes

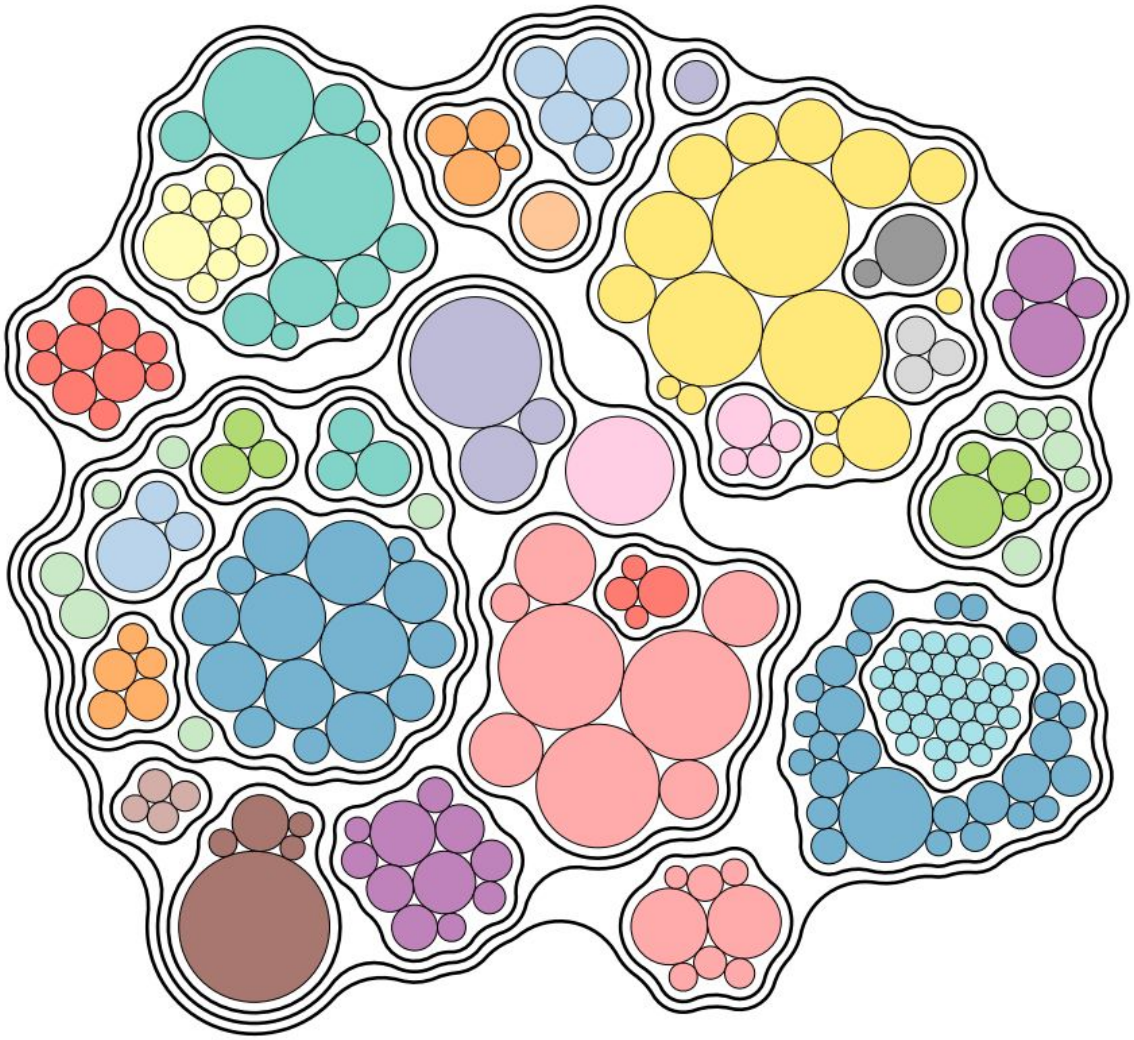
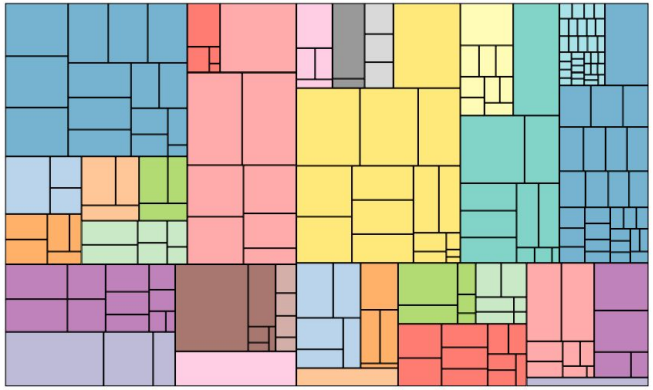
Bubble Treemaps





+ Good comparison of sizes

- Understanding of depth? Perhaps use color shades?

Treemap + Nodelink
Elastic Hierarchies
Hybrid

- Combine space-filling and compact view of matrices, with
- Effective visualization of hierarchy levels
- Efficient with interaction
